THE VENETIAN TRADITION IN PAINTING is the subject of a course offered this month at The Cleveland Museum of Art by Edward B. Henning, Assistant Curator of Education. This series of lectures is being given in connection with the current Venetian exhibition now at the Museum.

The class will meet in the galleries and in the classroom for four Wednesdays from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. beginning November 21. Mr. Henning will trace the development of the Venetian Tradition from the sixteenth through the nineteenth centuries, giving special attention to painting techniques, color and composition. Registrations are now being accepted in the Museum's Department of Education. Call GA 1-7340.
